HOW WISCONSIN BADGERS' JOHNNY DAVIS FOUND A NEW GEAR

By Andy Katz
FOX Sports College Basketball Analyst

Systems don't win games in major men's college basketball.

Players do.

And Wisconsin has one of the best this season — possibly the National Player of the Year who was not on any preseason first-team All-American list.

At least, not one that can be found.

Johnny Davis has burst like a rocket onto the national scene for Wisconsin, in the Big Ten, and likely pushed himself into the lottery in the 2022 NBA Draft.

How did this happen?

Davis was a seven-point scorer as a freshman on a senior-laden team. Sure, he was going to get the shots, the looks and the run for a Badgers team that allegedly was going to lean heavily on super-senior Brad Davison.

But this? Dropping 37 on Purdue in a win over the No. 3 team in the country in West Lafayette? Putting a 30-spot on Houston in the relocated Maui Invitational semifinal in Las Vegas en route to an MVP award after the Badgers beat Saint Mary's on Thanksgiving week?

Come on. Who saw this coming at Wisconsin?

Johnny and his twin brother, teammate Jordan, did. And so did Badgers coach Greg Gard, who is willingly loosening any restrictions on his go-to player.

"I don't think systems win. Players within the system win," Johnny Davis said a few days after his performance against Purdue. "Coach Gard has done a really good job of letting our team play. He isn't trying to control us too much. He's letting us play with freedom. That gives me the opportunity to play my game. This is a faster pace than what Wisconsin has been used to."

What has stood out to Gard? The effort every single possession.

"For Johnny, everything starts with his competitiveness, his killer instinct and his will to win," Gard said. "That's at the top of his motivating factors. But he also had a full offseason in [the] weight room, outside of a couple weeks with Team USA. That helped him add strength and explosiveness."

"The experience playing with USA Basketball also helped him greatly, maybe more mentally than physically. He was able to see that he's among the best players in the country. Playing on the world stage can do wonders in helping you believe."

Davis said he could have been this guy a year ago, but that wasn't his role. He was the glue guy. But he knew that wasn't his position this season.

Having the ability to prepare in what is historically the most important summer for college basketball players (from freshmen to sophomore season) was a must. But a traditional 2020 summer didn't exist for college players due to COVID-19. For Davis, making the USA Basketball team that won gold in the FIBA-19 tournament in Latvia was a game-changer.

He said he never would have imagined being in a position to make a team of a dozen of the best players in his peer group.

"It boosted my confidence to a whole 'nother level," Davis said.

He reiterated that he could have done more a season ago, but that wasn't his role.

"I just had to find my place to fit in," he said. "I was the glue guy, getting offensive rebounds, diving on the floor and guarding the opposing team's best player. Now everyone is gone but Brad, and they need me to be that person. I think I've done a good job of taking on that role."

Jordan says he has seen that aspect of Johnny's game every day.

"He knows his role, and he knew he could be that guy for us," said Jordan, who is a rotation player but will likely get his time to shine when Johnny exits after this season. "If we need buckets, he delivers."

Johnny Davis has scored at least 15 points in all 11 games the Badgers have played this season and is averaging 22.3 PPG. Wisconsin hasn't had a player average at least 20 since Michael Finley in 1995. The jump from seven PPG to 22 is the largest increase from any Big Ten player besides Davis' fellow sophomore (and fellow twin) Keegan Murray of Iowa, who went from seven PPG to 24.

The Badgers are 10-1 with Davis in the lineup. He missed the Providence home game due to a lower-body injury.

"It starts and ends with his assassin's heart, so to speak," Gard said. "He wants to win at everything he does. That's what drives him. We could see that back when he was in high school, in basketball and on the football field.

"In fact, he even drew a flag or two when he wasn't happy with things on the field, and he has learned how to channel that cut-throat mentality. He's the ultimate competitor, and when you step between the lines, that switch goes on. That's part of his DNA."

Brian Butch Basketball Academy Drill Work

How it works – You will cut to various areas on the floor, before setting up to take a shot. After taking an initial shot, you will repeat the same action on the other side of the floor. Each series of shots will include 5 from each side of the floor, or a total of 10 each round.

- Start at the elbow and sprint to the corner. Come back to the wing area, curling for a jump shot. Get to the starting elbow again, then slide to the other elbow before sprinting to the corner and curling back for a jump shot. Repeat this action 5 times for a total of 10 shots. (Shoot 5 Free Throws)

- Start at the free throw line. Sprint to the baseline (short corner area), then to the sideline and come back to a 3 point catch and shoot in the wing area. Sprint through the other short corner and touch the baseline, then the sideline and come back for a spot up 3 on the opposite wing. Repeat for 5 cycles for a total of 10 shots. (Shoot 5 Free Throws)

- Start at the top of the arc. Sprint to the timeline and back to the 3 point line for a pull-up 3. Shoot 5 shots from 3 designated spots (point, wing, wing) Total all 15 shots for best score. (Shoot 5 Free Throws)
