Bellin Sports Medicine Partners with Brian Butch Basketball

APPLETON — Bellin Health Sports Medicine is excited to announce its partnership with Brian Butch Basketball, bringing an abundance of athletic training resources to the academy and various basketball camps held in the Fox Valley, as well as satellite locations elsewhere in Wisconsin, Michigan and Minnesota.

“We are thrilled to be partnering with Bellin Health Sports Medicine,” said camp director Brian Butch. “Bellin Health provides top-of-the-line, innovative care for youth in our community. We are excited to partner with them to provide care and education to our over 3,000 program participants each year. With this partnership, we are looking forward to elevating our athletes’ knowledge and care to make them the best people they can be. We also look forward to being an outlet and support system for the school districts Bellin serves.”

This partnership aligns with the second-to-none care Bellin Health has provided to its patients and community for more than 110 years. In addition to physical well-being, this partnership will also focus on the equally important matters of nutritional and mental wellness.

“Bellin Health Sports Medicine is excited to partner with Brian Butch Basketball,” said Phil Schaible, Bellin Health Director of Orthopedics & Sports Medicine. “His program focuses on youth and developing them as both fundamentally solid basketball players and as people. Together we will elevate the quality of experience for these young athletes. Brian will also be able to support the high school and youth programs at the 28 school districts we serve in Northeast Wisconsin and the Upper Peninsula. Our goal is a cost-effective quality experience being made available to any interested partners of Bellin Health Sports Medicine.”
